The community came together to support FFLC. They wanted to help. A couple in the community inspired by the kids matched what they raised for a total of about $15,933 — enough to provide nearly 48,000 meals! Thank you!

There are so many people out there who really need the best that can be helped. I just hope that this can motivate and help other people to never do us something and do it again, because that is not just mine. It is all of us.

I think it brought out the best in people because they know they were making a difference. And they really wanted to do the best that they could.

There’s no much business. The good things need to be said. There are so many people out there that you can do the best that they can help. I just hope that this can motivate and help other people to never do something and do it again, because that is not just mine. It is all of us.
Volunteering is a family affair
Ben. Delgado was so excited to return and helping for something that would put him out of the house and help people of the same time.

“"There was an ad in the paper mentioning Meals on Wheels volunteers, and my Dad, Ben, 'I'll be there'...”
